

Pedagogy Newsletter #45

6th December 2019

Dear colleagues,

Evidence suggests that the explicit teaching of learning behaviours can support behavior through a positive general climate for learning. Learning behaviours are those which support learning and promote engagement through self-regulation. This is directly correlated with behavior, as pupils who are engaged with their learning.

Below is a useful article about why Ofsted is now explicitly checking that students 'know how to study effectively' and we can ensure that they do.

Weekly Writing Outcome Example (English)

This week's weekly writing comes from a year 1 pupil at Culloden Primary Academy.

The pupil wrote this piece in response to the Shared Reading text: Around the World in Eighty Days. The remit was to (as an independent piece of writing) write a description of Phileas Fogg.

We have chosen this piece of work because it showcases a number of devices that make an effective description.
